ROAD ELECTRIFYING TO LESSEN SMOKE IS GIVEN AN ADVANCE

Boston Landowners Put up Plea Before Legislative Committee on Metropolitan Affairs Through Counsel.

ENGINEER SPEAKER

Hollis French Looks Into the Question of Costs and Finds Lines Would Make Large Saving by Project.

The proposition of abolishing the smoke nuisance in metropolitan Boston by compelling the railroads having terminals in Boston to electrify their lines and of encouraging the plans involved in the Boston Holding Company, received a great impetus today when 200 land owners in Boston and vicinity, repsented by Francis Peabody, Jr., appeared before the committee on metropolitan affairs and gave it their hearty indorse-

The conditions existing at Trinity court station, Back Bay station and South station are such as would not be tolerated in any other country. The built a hotel." smoke nuisance can be avoided, as is well shown in New York city.

If the cost of equipment is not positively prohibitive, the railroads should be made to electrify their lines.

Mr. Peabody then introduced Engineer Hollis French to explain the question of cost. He said in part:

"The expenditures attendant upon electrification are divided into those di. has just returned from a trip to the rectly involved in the electrification South. itself and collateral expenditures. No accurate figures can be given, either of FOUR-ALARM FIRE the first cost or the comparative operat ing expenses. In and about New York, where electricity has been used by the New York Central, the New Haven, the Long Island road, the Pennsylvania and others, there is no doubt whatever of the successful practical working of the various systems. "As for the economies, one of the first is in the item of fuel. The saving to be expected is fully 50 per cent. The next large saving is due to decreased maintenance of equipment. On suburban trains there will also be considerable saving in labor, due to the fact that no fireman will be required. A much higher mileage capacity is possible with electric locomotives and multiple unit trains so that the rolling stock is in service a greater per- streets. centage of time. Delays in operation are much reduced, the average speed of the trains is higher and the acceleration is more rapid. A most important result is increase in passengers carried, increasing the income of the road.

"A vice-president of the New York Central road has stated that the electric locomotive gives 25 per cent greater daily mileage and saves 19 per cent in maintenance, 18 per cent in time, 12 per cent net saving in cost of hauling, 21 per cent net saving in cost of switching

Brockton head-master announces increased price today.

BROCKTON-The high cost of living problem hit the lunch counter at the Brockton high school today, when prices of sandwiches and fancy articles of food were increased.

Previous to recess Head Master C. T. C. Whitcomb summoned the pupils to assembly hall and read the revised schedule of prices. He said that he deplored the necessity for making the advance, but the expenses of the lunch counter were far greater than the receipts, there having been a deficit of $75 in the past three months. As a result of the increased prices many of the pupils are planning to bring their own lunches."

This want a certain man, born in the Tyrol at the beginning of the sixteenth century, endeavored to supply. He went to Bologna and there became a famous maker of lutes, violas and basses. For what we know of him, we are mainly indebted to the industrious researches of Dr. Edmund Schebeck of Prague who called him the forerunner of the great Italian violin-makers. HARVARD AND YALE WILL MEET AGAIN TO SETTLE CHESS TITLE

Another Contest Will Be Held Next Saturday in the Rooms of the Harvard Chess Club.

PLAY FOUR BOARDS

Harvard and Yale will again try to break the intercollegiate chess champion. ship tie on Saturday at the rooms of the Harvard Chess Club in Gray's hall Cambridge. The referee who had charge of the adjudication of the two games which were played in New Haven about two months ago has finally decided that they were a draw, necessitating the second playoff which has just been arranged for.

This time the match will be made up of four boards, by mutual consent of the two colleges. This will greatly lessen the chances of another draw resulting. It is in opposition to the rules of the intercollegiate association which says that all drawn matches must be decided by two boards, but as the contestants have agreed to the change, no complications are expected.

The two teams will probably be made up the same as when they played in the big tournament at New York, as fol-

Poggenburg showed the best form he has displayed during the meet, making an average of 10 10-39 and turning in a fine run of 69. Conklin did not seem to be at his best, his average being 9 2-38 and his best run one of 56. His defeat was a big surprise to the followers of the game, and it will now be necessary for him to defeat E. W. Gardner in order to tie for the title.

NEW YORK-Presenting the same lineup as last year, the Boston Amerithis afternoon with the New York Americans. The usual ceremonies precede the game and an interesting contest journey to the park.

The Gardner at second and Foster at short will greatly improve the infield. The addition of Criger to the catching staff will not only greatly improve that department, but will make the pitching staff much more efficient. Manager Stallings has a number of promising young pitchers who will be sure to make good with such a past master as Criger at first base, and the choice lies between catching them.

Unless Collins, Karger and Wood show improved form over 1909, the team can hardly be expected to finish better than third. As a hitting and fielding team it is one of the best in Gaudel has been doing well on first base and Blackburn is showing up well at short, two placed where the 1909 team was decidedly weak.

Cleveland will present a number of changes this season. The placing of Lajoie on first, Turner on second, Ball short and Bradley third should make the infield much faster than last year. Ball is the weakest part of the combination and it is said that Lajoie may later be shifted to short and Stovall again placed on first. With Flick again playing regularly, the outfield should be stronger than in some years. Joss, Falkenberg, Young and Berger will do the bulk of the pitching, and if they are in

WATERVILLE, Me. - Although there are but few experienced men out, baseball prospects at Colby after a few weeks' outdoor practise are far from discouraging. Coach Bernard J. McGraw has been greatly handicapped by a lack of experienced candidates, as the team has lost by graduation most of the stars of last year, while Lauder, shortstop, and Nutting at first base failed to return to college. But in spite of these handicaps the new men in the squad are showing up exceedingly well, and under the coaching of McGraw and Ralph Goode should make a good showing in the Maine league this spring. It is not, however, expected with a green team to beat cans open their league season of 1910 out the veteran Bowdoin and Bates teams. The freshman candidates of which the team will probably be composed comprise a number of men who have made good records in preparatory is expected by the many followers who school, several of whom have had experience in the Maine State and Aroos-

ASSESSING CAUSES INVESTORS TO SEEK

As the result of the diligent search for personal property by assessors of Massachusetts during the past year, there is today a larger amount of Massachusetts capital invested in non-taxable securities than at any previous time in the history of the state, says the Boston News Bureau today.

This fact is to be regretted, especially in Boston, as it will result in a higher tax rate this year, which must fall on owners of real estate, says the publication, which adds:

"Some assessors frankly admit that they carried the search for personal property entirely too far last year, as owners of personal property have taken unusual where it cannot be reached for taxation and to a large degree have bought taxexempt stocks.

"Another factor which will cause a higher tax rate generally throughout the state this year is the lower level of security prices on April 1 last than on May item in determining the tax rate of Bos- possible. ton, as it represents about 25 per cent of total valuation of the city.

"May 1, 1909, personal property valuations in Boston amounted to $244,409,500. "With larger appropriations necessary for schools, and a shrinkage in personal property subject to taxation, there will undoubtedly be a tax rate in Boston this rate for the past two years. "The highest rate in the history of the city was in 1884, when $17 a thousand was reached, but this record will probably be exceeded this year."

(Special to The Monitor.) For 20 years George Alexander has held the position of actor-manager, and at the St. James Theater, at the end of the performance of "The Importance of played in it. Doubtless her active in-Being Ernest," he received an enthusiastic reception from the large audience which had assembled, partly to enjoy English stage today. Wyld's most popular comedy and partly to congratulate the manager on the anniversary of his management. In a speech Mr. Alexander read the following telegram he had received from the members of the Dramatists' Club:

A list of plays that have appeared under Mr. Alexander's management will show how conspicuous has been his service to the interests of modern dramatic literature. It required no small courage for a young manager to produce "The second Mrs. Tanqueray," indeed, at the time of its appearing it could ing in Isben's "Little Eyolf." have been nothing less than an act of Robertson's "Caste" with an "all star" Miss Bertha Graves. venture. Among the many successes of cast will be presented at the Empire the St. James' management may be mentioned: "The Idler." "Lady Windered, "C. P. "His House in Order," "The Thief," and lastly the play that has been revived with so conspicuous a success. "The Importance of Being Ernest.'

Though Alexander has been Miniatures" by Miss Constance D'Arcy seen in all sorts of plays and has revived more than one of Shakespeare's comedies, it is perhaps in modern comedy that he chiefly excels.

In such plays as the one in which he is now appearing he acts with a gaiety and lightness of touch that places him in the front rank of light comedians. It is also pleasant to add that never has Alexander acted better than he does today. In the "Thief" he played with a power that gave strength to a play that possessed within itself none too much of that quality. He has lost, too, or very nearly, certain stilted manerisms that went far to spoil a great deal of excellent work.

Thomas Jefferson, the Statesman Fine tribute to American patriot by Robert C. Ogden, New York

N EW YORK-Robert C. Ogden said Wednesday night at the Labor Temple, Second avenue and Fourteenth street, that Thomas Jefferson was probably the greatest statesman this country ever knew. "He has been appropriated by one of our great political parties," he continued, "but he does not belong to any one party. He belongs to the whole country."

In referring to Jefferson's proposed elaborate system of education, Mr. Ogden said: "It is mortifying to think that with the advancement this country has known in other things, we have not even begun to yet realize his dreams of education." He added: "Although Jefferson was something of an aristocrat, for he introduced the first French chef into America, he was distinctly democratic in his ideas, and his wonderful reforms have lived for those who have come after him." He felt that opinions expressed at the ballot box would right the wrongs, and the theory of freedom of religion became a cardinal principle with him. "We hear a great deal about so much being done by our rich men. But after all the great work is being done by the people whose names and deeds we never know, the immense democracy. The new interpretation of religion that is practised today is the perfection of the state. Every one is taught to work for society before the individual, and this uplift of the whole manifests itself in all sorts of ways. We must thank

Petition for Lowell Park Soon to Be Heard

Proposed Livingston Reservation would be only one in city having natural water.

VIEW OF STREAM IN LOWELL'S PROPOSED LIVINGSTON PARK. The watercourse is Black brook and a bathhouse on its banks would be a notable addition to the city's park facilities. The 35 acres of land is much varied both as to contour and the trees upon it.

LOWELL, Mass.-A petition signed by many of Lowell's leading citizens will be presented to the city council at an early date asking for a public hearing in behalf of the proposed Livingston park.

This site is between Middlesex and Princeton streets. It extends from Savles street westerly to the middle of Black brook on the northern end, and to Webber street on the southern end.

This site has many natural advantages for park purposes. It contains about 35 acres, with a meadow and upland, two or three small hills and a patch of woodland which gives the impression that the size is much greater than it really is. It would be extremely difficult to find a like area containing such an abundance of natural beauty.

Among the many varieties of trees can be found large willows, elms, maples, butternuts, hickories, oaks, birches and pines; in fact, nearly all the trees native to this climate. The nature lover will delight in the abundance of wild flowers, and in the fact that the natural charms of the place make it a veritable bird's paradise.

No other park in Lowell has water flowing through it. Black brook, a stream of pure water, winds its way through this land and on its bank could be erected at small cost a bathhouse, of which the city is greatly in need.

In the groves, tables and chairs could be provided for the accommodation of parties and picnics. There is ample room in the meadow for baseball grounds and tennis courts, both of which are greatly desired by the young people.

The location can easily be reached by a number of electric car lines. Princeton boulevard forms the southern boundary. This would be the only park in Lowell located on a state highway. The superintendent of the park commission in one of his reports strongly recommended the purchase of this prop-

The Massachusetts House Wednesday assed the bar and bottle bill to engrossnent on a voice vote.

Points of order and amendments in large number were offered by the opponents of the bill, which, when it becomes a law, will force saloons to sell only by the glass over a bar, and compel those who wish to dispense liquor by the bottle to take out a fourth class license at some other address than that for which a saloon license has been issued.

During the day there were several amendments offered. Representative Doyle of New Bedford, at the forenoon session, moving one which stipulated that the bill should go into effect May 1, 1911. In the afternoon he withdrew this and offered another striking out section 2 of the bill, which provides that it shall take effect upon its passage. The effect of the amendment would be that the measure, if enacted in that shape, would take effect 30 days after it was signed by Governor Draper.

In the end the amendment was made the test, although a previous one, offered by Representative Morrill of Haverhill, which sought to secure a general referendum on the proposition, was defeated by the same vote, 132 to 96.

GENERAL BUSINESS PROSPECTS.

EARN FULL YEAR'S

At End of Eight Month Amount for Dividends Had Been Obtained for Entire Fiscal Year of Companies

NORTHERN PACIFIC

NEW YORK-At the end of February for eight months, three of the four Hi roads had earned their full year's sur plus required for regular dividends. The fourth has lagged behind. Great Northern, with its slightly les than $210,000,000 stock receiving 7 pe balance above charges of approximately $14,700,000.

Northern Pacific, with $248,000,000 stock and a 7 per cent rate, needs $17, 360,000. It had earned at the end of the eighth month about $15,000,000, leaving less than $3,000,000 to be made up in the four remaining months. There is little question that the full sum will be earned, with a few millions to spare. Chicago, Burlington & Quincy has $110,839,100 stock, with dividend require ments of $8,867,128. Eight months' earnnings after charges were about $9,900,000, indicating another generous increase for the year in the Northern-Great Northern's equity. Colorado & Southern has $8,500,000 preferred and 2 per cent on the common there is needed only $1,300,000. Surplus for the first two thirds of the year was $2,438,000. Earnings of both Great Northern and Northern Pacific were hard hit during December, January and February, as the first and second preferred and $31,000,

000 common. To pay 4 per cent on the

There is little likelihood, from this showing, that either Northern Pacific or Great Northern will increase its dividend rate or make any extra distribution this year. Burlington could pay 10 per cent if desired, and the additional $2,200,000 thus called for would go directly into the treasuries of the two controlling roads, but Burlington interests lend no support to such a proposal at this time. Colorado & Southern is expected to increase the payment on its common stock when it has finished spending money on extraordinary improvements on roadbed, which still needs

THE CHRISTIAN SCIENCE MONITOR

"First the blade, then the ear, then the full grain in the ear."

EDITORIAL

Boston, Mass., Thursday, April 14, 1910.

Colonel Roosevelt and Conservation FRIENDS of Mr. Taft as well as friends of Mr. Pinchot will find something significant as well as comforting in the news from Porto Maurizio, in so far as it relates to the result of the conference between the latter and Colonel Roosevelt. A correspondent who is very close to the former President and who is supposed generally to speak by the card, insists that Colonel Roosevelt's consent to be present and to speak at the national conservation congress this summer should set all doubts at rest as to the friendliness of his attitude toward the ex-chief forester. The inference to be drawn from this is that Colonel Roosevelt will attend and speak at the national conservation congress for the express purpose of exhibiting his approval of Mr. Pinchot's course previous to his release from the duties of the office which he held at the time of the former President's departure, and of displaying his disapproval of those who have not been in agreement with that

Fearing that such an impression might be conveyed to the people of the United States, Colonel Roosevelt took prompt steps to make his position plain. In a despatch, evidently inspired, after protesting that his actions are frequently misunderstood, the colonel explains that very naturally his interest in the conservation movement had in no wise been dampened by the trouble which has occurred in the interior department, adding that he would have attended the congress regardless of what had happened during his absence, and that in his address he would not necessarily speak of the past, but of the future. What Colonel Roosevelt desires, evidently, is that we shall not assume from anything we may hear that he is disposed to decide the matter, as between Mr. Pinchot and President Taft, at least until the latter shall be fully heard.

It is hardly within the bounds of reasonable probability that the ex-President, because of the differences which have arisen between Mr. Taft and Mr. Pinchot, will determine to break old ties and shatter old friendships, or to imperil the entire conservation movement, by assisting in making it at once a personal and a partizan issue. More likely he will determine to patch matters up in every way possible. The colonel is full of aggressiveness, it is true, but he has not been too hastily pronounced one of the shrewdest of our present-day politicians.

STILL, it must be almost solacing to the advocates of universal peace to think that while the world powers appear determined to build more warships, experience is teaching the people that even the most formidable of such vessels are likely to become candidates for the scrap heap in the course of fifteen to thirty years.

'Again it is reported that the summit of Mt. McKinley has been reached, the attempt of the Fairbanks party, financed by August Peterson and William McPhee, being claimed to have been successful. Mt. McKinley is the highest mountain in North America and the highest far northern peak in the world. Its altitude is about 20,000 feet. Dr. Frederick A. Cook declared that he had climbed to the top and left there records of his achievement. The truth of his assertion was doubted, and as a result of a controversy over this and his polar discovery claims the Fairbanks expedition was undertaken. Its members say they reached the summit of Mt. McKinley on April 3, after a month of steady climbing from the base of the mountain. No traces of Dr. Cook's alleged ascent were found.

There is a disposition in some quarters to question whether the Fairbanks party achieved the reported triumph. The critics say the snow line comes down low on the flanks of Mt. McKinley, which lies only 300 miles south of the Arctic circle. Aconcagua, in South 'America, is about 3000 feet higher than McKinley, but Aconcagua is in the temperate zone (33 south latitude) and easily accessible from Chile and Argentina. It presents no such difficulties as Mt. McKinley, yet the Fitzgerald expedition was six months conquering Aconcagua, while the Fairbanks climbers claim to have accomplished the remarkable feat of ascending Mt. McKinley in one month.

It is unfortunate that a mist of doubt should continue to envelop this Alaskan peak. There are two peaks of like height, one covered with snow and the other by rocks, according to the account of the Fairbanks men, who are said to be experienced mountaineers. Their report is credited by Prof. Herschel Parker of Columbia University, who was a member of Dr. Cook's expedition when that explorer said he had ascended the mountain alone. Dr. Parker disputes the Cook claim. He himself will head an expedition that will this summer try to touch the snowy crown of this northern giant.

THE interstate commerce commission has made a ruling which reduces the rates for sleeping-car berths, but it has not yet dared to suggest the propriety of offering the Pullman porters a smaller or more infrequent "tip."

The Cold Storage Case to Date THERE can be little doubt now that legislation will soon enable the federal government to exercise close supervision over the cold storage warehouses. It is equally certain that in future there will be greater restriction as to the length of time articles of food shall be held in those establishments. What bearing this supervision and these restrictions may have upon prices in future, however, it is impossible to say. The public is in as good a position as either of the committees of Congress now inquiring into the matter to form conclusions as to the part the cold storage houses have played toward creating or maintaining the present high scale of prices, for the testimony brought out so far, especially before the Senate committee, has been given very full publicity. The impression left upon the open and impartial mind, we believe, is that while cold storage may have been, and probably is, a factor in the matter of high prices, it is by no means a primary cause of the general advance in the cost of living. John A. Kunkel, of S. S. Long & Brother, produce dealers, New York city, a witness before the Senate committee on Tuesday, on being asked what would be the result if the cold storage plants were wiped out of existence, answered that at certain seasons of the year eggs would sell at eight and nine cents a dozen, and at other seasons at from 75 cents to $1 a dozen. The cold storage plants, he maintained, tended to equalize the price and were, therefore, a benefit to the consumer as well as to the producer.

Another New York witness, John A. Walton, a wholesaler in eggs, butter and cheese, went before the committee with facts intended to prove that the supply rather than the storage plants regulated the price of butter. One indirect advantage of high prices, he held, was that sooner or later they led to an increase of production, leaving the inference that in this would be found the real solution of the problem.

This testimony is typical. It recalls the days in which the farmers were fighting the grain elevators. They learned from the inquiry resulting that the trouble was not in the grain warehouses but in the fact that they should be located nearer home. The farmers do not complain of the elevator system any longer, because they employ it themselves. Cold storage, in all likelihood, will be established nearer the producer hereafter, and with greater advantage to the consumer also, since the great bulk of the produce will not be packed off as now to the chief centers of population for later distribution.

The cold storage business demands intelligent regulation. The public, if it had the choice, would not go back to the old system.

Trolley

Extension in the Middle

West

St. Louis is very properly felicitating herself that with the exception of a small gap a trolley ride may now be taken from that city to all important points in the middle West north of the Ohio and in the eastern and New England states. Most of the lines that form links in this great system were built with the purpose of connecting neighboring towns or of forming interurban connection. Gradually however the lines connection. Gradually, however, the lines have become linked together so that for long distances one may ride over the tracks of different companies without changing cars. This, of course, is but a repetition of our early steam railroad history. The present great trunk lines, in many instances, were formed from local roads, the names of which are preserved now only in court

However, as in steam railroad construction, there are instances in which trolley lines are being constructed in the middle West with the view, originally, to their operation as a system. This is true of the McKinley lines, which now cover a large section of central Illinois, and which, before the end of the present year, will have connection with the St. Louis trolley system. A bridge across the Mississippi for the accommodation of the McKinley lines is approaching completion and will be opened for traffic next fall. The McKinley lines are being extended in other directions also. It will not be long before they will have reached points in the extreme southern part of Illinois. The managers intend to bridge the Ohio at or near Cairo and to carry on trolley construction into Kentucky.

There are sections of the middle West at present which are literally gridironed with trolley lines. With few exceptions, they are making a satisfactory return on the investments involved by their construction. Nothing has so far occurred to justify the alarmist prediction that they would benefit some towns at the expense of others. Some losses here and there result from the shifting of trade and population, but it is found that the territory in which trolley construction has been general is benefited as a whole and that in the readjustment the local losses are more apparent than real.

A CHICAGO college professor says: "If culture could be attached to the point of a javelin you couldn't force it through the pachydermatous hide of the average American." ENGLISHMEN who have purchased the San Luis ranch of 855,000 acres in Mexico are planning to place 200,000 acres under irrigation and to colonize them with farmers.

The Dolliver Vocational Bill THE government educates young men for service in the army and in the navy. It also supports Indian schools. In these instances no question can be raised as to legitimacy of function. Opponents of paternalism would hardly question the right of the federal authority to educate young men and women for its civil service. But by common understanding and consent the question of educating the people as a whole, or any part of them, along general or special lines, has been left to the states or to private institutions. It is worthy of more than passing notice that people who would be vehement in decrying anything like a tendency toward paternalism in some directions yield easily to temptation when some movement in which they are specially interested seems to need, and is engaged in reaching after, federal aid.

Nobody of intelligence will deny the great need of vocational training, and with the purpose of Senator Dolliver's measure, all good citizens are likely to sympathize. The bill offered by the Iowa senator contemplates annual federal aid for schools that take boys and girls at the age of fourteen years, after they have received a fundamental education, and train them for their vocations. The measure, we are told, calls for annual appropriations beginning with $4,000,000, and after three years $11,000,000 annually, and it applies to industrial, trade and vocational schools.

Vocational schools have become a necessity. This fact is recognized in all industrial districts of the country. Already many such schools are in existence, and are receiving generous state, municipal and private aid. The states, the municipalities, and private citizens who have the means, should enlarge the scope and possibilities of these institutions and establish new ones. But it is not clear why the federal government should take a hand in this matter. The states and municipalities, in its public aspect, are perfectly competent to take care of it. Still more important than this, federal action would establish a questionable precedent. It would mean the longest step we have taken thus far in the direction of paternalism.

The government has all it can do to perform its proper functions efficiently. The subsidizing of schools of any kind, other than those at present within its jurisdiction, is not properly a federal duty.

The result of the Mid-Glamorgan election has made no change in the distribution of parties in the House of Commons. It is not impossible, however, that it may figure in the future as one of the historical elections in English politics. Up to the present time there has been a general, if not a very defined, agreement between the Liberal and Labor parties as to their respective spheres of influence. At the general election cer-

The Mid-Glamorgan Election tain candidates were withdrawn on both sides to avoid triangular contests. There is no reason whatever to suppose that this was the result of any concordat. It was, no doubt, largely a matter of safety to the respective parties. One of these candidates was Mr. Hartshorn, a representative of the South Wales Miners Federation. The sitting member for Mid-Glamorgan, the attorney-general, Sir Samuel Evans, was, in consequence, returned by the huge majority of 9793 votes over the Unionist, G. H. Williams, by a combination of the Labor and Liberal electors. Whether or no there was any agreement between the whips of the Labor party and the whips of the Liberal party is not apparent, but it is claimed by the Labor party that there was at least a general understanding that at the next election the seat should be handed over to the Labor men as the predominant partner.

This assertion certainly has the support of the fact that, when Sir Samuel Evans became a judge, the Liberal whips prepared to hand over the seat to the Labor party and strongly discouraged every effort to contest it by their own party. If there was, any agreement, that agreement had not been shared by the local Liberals. and the local Liberals absolutely declined to recognize any such bargain, and in a most determined way put up their own candidate in the person of Mr. Gibbons and proceeded to fight the election on the cry of Liberalism as opposed to socialism. The result has been to justify the action they took, though to what extent their victory is owing to the Conservative vote it is quite impossible to say. The Labor men naturally claim that it was the Conservatives who turned the scale. The Liberals, on the other hand, insist that not more than 500 of their votes came from local Conservatives, who had received a hint from headquarters in London to allow the two parties to fight the battle out between themselves.

Be this as it may, it is not the vital element in the election. The vital element is disclosed in the fact that for the first time since the coalition came into existence an open rupture has taken place between the two wings, and that open rupture has been the work not of the leaders, but of the rank and file. The Welsh Liberal Non-Conformist party, in refusing to support the Labor candidate on the ground that he was the exponent of socialism, have taken a step which cannot fail to be far-reaching in its effect, and may eventually lead, not merely to the disruption of the coalition, but to an actual contest between the two parties in every one of the numerous constituencies in which their interests come in contact. This would mean the development of a new factor in the politics of the United Kingdom, and might easily lead to an eventual coalition of moderate Liberalism with Conservatism, and the organization of two great parties which would take the place of the Liberal and the Conservative parties as completely as those parties in their turn took the place of the Tories and the Whigs.

THE postal deficit is disappearing. Postmaster-General Hitch-cock thinks the year's excess of expenditures over receipts may fall as low as $5,000,000.

The Political Tide EXPERIENCED observers of political conditions will not permit themselves to be carried away by present manifestations of popular emotion whether they be favorable or unfavorable to the administration or to the Republican party. It is evident to them that partizans have already begun to align themselves with the leadership and the policies of their choice, so that an ovation for Mr. Taft or for Mr. Wickersham, on the one side, or an ovation for Mr. Beveridge or for Mr. Cummins on the other, or an anti-Republican demonstration on the part of a miscellaneous audience, so-called, carries with it now a meaning very different from that which it would have conveyed a short time ago. In other words, the scattered individual regulars and insurgents, and the scattered individual independent Democrats, and the Democrats who went over to McKinley and remained with Roosevelt, are gravitating rapidly toward congenial centers and making themselves heard and felt in groups.

One correspondent telegraphs that Mr. Wickersham made a decided impression in his Chicago speech, another that in his Washington speech Mr. Taft aroused the greatest enthusiasm. Another correspondent telegraphs that from all appearances the speeches of the attorney-general and the President have "turned the tide" in favor of the administration. We may hear the reverse of this very frequently during the next few months, as we may frequently have news which seemingly or actually confirms it. But as the time goes by the reader, becoming better informed day by day, will be influenced with regard to the value of political demonstrations by knowledge of the bias of those taking part in them. As the congressional campaign proceeds, the lines of partizanship will be more closely drawn and we shall all be less surprised to hear the cheering of positive statements for or against the men and measures up for discussion.

The political tide will doubtless ebb and flow continually from this time on, but one must have some definite water marks for guidance before one can form anything like an intelligent conclusion with regard to the general drift. The influence that determines finally how the tide shall set will hardly begin to operate seriously until the season is much further advanced, or until the Taft administration shall have shown its real attitude toward the insurgents and Colonel Roosevelt shall have expressed himself plainly with regard to the Taft administration.
